

From NPR's Scott Hensley:

"In a statement issued after the latest recall was announced, Rep. Edolphus Towns (D-NY), chairman of the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform said:

'I launched the committee's investigation into Johnson and Johnson more than eight months ago in order to provide the American people answers they deserve about the safety of Johnson and Johnson's over the counter products. Today's recall provides a troubling indication that the company continues to exhibit serious shortcomings with its quality control procedures.'"
